"Hilary Liu, Elijah Brown, and Taylor Duffy were without exaggeration the BEST medical students I have worked with in my three years as a resident at CHP. I have never met students more enthusiastic or ready to learn than they were. Each of them was truly first call for their patients, taking ownership and completing tasks often without any further prompting after rounds. I saw each of them handle difficult conversations with poise, coordinate care effectively, and bring such a positive energy to the team throughout the week. They each worked on self-improvement consistently, whether it was working on strengthening their newborn exams, working on their daily assessments, or trying out their hand at anticipatory guidance for discharge.

Our entire team was impressed. I have never been moved to personally email about medical students before... I wish all three of them the best and think they'll make fantastic doctors in the future."
